Research Question: How does the teaching of an organizational checklist and graphic organizers affect struggling second grade students in their informational writing? Sub Questions: (1) Would an organizational checklist lead to better informational writing?

(more writing samples with a level 3 according to AUSD rubric); (2) Would a graphic organizer lead to better informational writing? (more writing samples with a level 3 according to AUSD rubric).
Research Activities: This research focuses on teaching students to organize their writing better by using the Step Up to Writing approach. The students were introduced to a graphic organizer which they used throughout the inquiry. The students then were taught to use a writing checklist to help them organize and improve their writing skills.
Context: The study took place in a self contained second grade classroom in a public school. The intervention was implemented with the whole class, but focused on four focus students. Out of the four students, one was an English language learner, whose primary language was Chinese. Methods and Data: The intervention lasted a period of six weeks and incorporated a variety of writing activities to practice the tools being taught in the inquiry. In addition, peer work through the use of the writing checklist increased collaboration. Data sets include a pre and post writing assignment, an attitudinal survey and a series of observations. Results: The comparisons of pre and post intervention data indicate that the use of the graphic organizer and writing checklist positively increased students' scores. The writing activities, with the use of the writing tools improved the students' with the organization of their writing and their ability to focus on one topic. Using the checklist gave students the ability to work with one another creating a sense of responsibility. Grade Level: Second Grade. Data Collection Methods: Observation-behavior tallies, student work, Survey - attitude, writing assessment, writing samples. Curriculum Areas: English Language Arts, Writing. Instructional Approaches: Writing-Prompts, Writing-Organization, Writing-Explicit instruction, Writing-Peer response/feedback, Writing-Self-evaluation. Graphic Organizer and Checklist Routledge The Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association

This study analyzes the website choices that English as a Second Language (ESL) students make when they choose authoritative information for academic purposes. For this study, students from four sections of ENGL 1110 for international students at the University of Toledo participated in a web information literacy course that took place during one of their class sessions. During this section, a website evaluation checklist, called the C.R.A.P. test, was explained to the students. This checklist is intended to be a guide that helps students choose credible (or authoritative) websites. After the web literacy class, each of the four classes participated in a different procedure in order to see which procedure was more effective in helping ESL students choose authoritative websites. Group A was requested to ask a professor for suggestions regarding what authoritative websites to use for their research paper. Group B was requested to use a librarian approved web portal. Group C was required to complete the C.R.A.P. website evaluation form for each website that they chose for research paper. Group D was the control group. A Checklist For Everything (eBook) Shell Education Developed for grades K-5, this rich resource provides teachers with practical strategies to enhance science instruction. This study had a research purpose and a pedagogical purpose. Research disclosed the dynamic, changing nature of (learner-internal and learner-external) variables that influence strategic competence for developing EFL/ESL writers. This competence was found necessary for international graduate students to move from writer-centered learning to reader-centered communication. The research instruments proved to be practical tools for guiding learners' processes of learning and writing a scholarly paper or article and avoiding plagiarism. The implication for teachers and program administrators is a systematic approach for developing self-regulation (control) in EFL/ESL writing. The first part of the book reports on the mixed methods (quantitative and qualitative) research. The second part gives an in-depth report of the 6 cases used in the research. The third part presents tools for systematically developing self-regulation in scholarly (and academic) writing with (a) student and teacher checklists for formative assessment that are valid and reliable; and (b) a model syllabus for teachers that can be adapted across disciplines and genres. These tools deal with learning strategies and their applications to writing and writing instruction.
