Routledge
Drawing on a wide range of anthropological case studies, this book focuses on ordinary ethics in contemporary China. The book examines the kinds of moral and ethical issues that emerge (sometimes almost unnoticed) in the flow of everyday life in Chinese communities. How are schoolchildren judged to be good or bad by their teachers and their peers - and how should a 'bad' student be dealt with? What exactly do children owe their parents, and how should this debt be repaid? Is it morally acceptable to be jealous if one's neighbours suddenly become rich? Should the wrongs of the past be forgotten, e.g. in the interests of communal harmony, or should they be dealt with now? In the case of China, such questions have obviously been shaped by the historical contexts against which they have been posed, and by the weight of various Chinese traditions. But this book approaches them on a human scale. More specifically, it approaches them from an anthropological perspective, based on participation in the flow of everyday life during ethnographic fieldwork in Chinese communities.

Genistein is a naturally occurring isoflavone that interacts with estrogen receptors & multiple other molecular targets. Human exposure to Genistein is through consumption of soy products, including soy-based infant formula & dietary supplements. A series of short-term studies with Genistein was conducted with two goals: to obtain data necessary to establish dose levels for subsequent multi-generation reproductive & chronic toxicity studies; & to evaluate the effects of Genistein on endpoints outside the reproductive tract. This report focuses on the reproductive & toxicology endpoints. Data obtained in separate evaluations of behavioral, neuroanatomical, neurochemical, & immunological endpoints are also discussed. Illustrations.
