Protopresbyter Alexander Schmemmann: Women and the Priesthood Would that you were either cold or hot!" (Rev. 3:15) Schmemmann's definition of secularism comes close to the definition of a nominal or cultural Christian. Still, Schmemmann sees secularism as a religion having its own faith, eschatology, and ethics—the erosion of a sense of transcendence among Christians suggests that secularism also practices evangelism (99).
