The brown house at the end of Shaker Street is a bit shady. Everyone who moves in gets scared off. Liv is convinced the house is haunted by the ghost of its late owner, General Pablo Carlos, Michael doesn't buy it, and Leo want nothing to do with ghosts! One thing's for certain, something fishy is going on. The Mysterious Makers set to making a ghost detector to determine just what's behind the spirit on Shaker Street. Real-life makers can keep the fun going and create their own detector and levitating ghost with instructions at the end of the book, and a glossary and reader questions make this a great choice.

 LG Williams is a vivid storyteller. He has written another characteristically startlingly fresh book with a provocatively happy ending. You can not read a book more enthralling, more moving, more unforgettably illumined by profoundly human truths than these poems on the rise, the fall, and the ultimate redemption of first-rate American stereotypes. Particularly impressive are LG's passions, allegiances and assessments, which are finally being heralded after years of recrimination, marginalization and slander. Is this really LG Williams, the blinding beacon in the dank, dark, sticky folds of the derailed and overturned contemporary psyche? Perhaps he's right. Perhaps narcolepsy, hypocrisy, alcohol and sentimentality - forget divine intervention or scientific logic -are the perversely simple secret survival codes for the everyday American "raison d'eter".

Virginio Ferrari is an internationally acclaimed contemporary sculptor, whose monumental sculptures can be found on street corners and public parks, at universities and libraries, corporations and in private collections in Chicago, and all over the world. Ferrari's current work has been described as lyrical abstract sculpture in bronze, stainless steel, marble and granite. His work is preoccupied with creating situations that delight the eye, allowing for the interaction of sculpture and the casual observer, giving the modern city a human dimension. Virginio Ferrari: Full Circle 1957-2017, is a limited edition monograph art book on sculptor Virginio Ferrari. The beautifully designed 612 page hardbound book with dimensions of 11.5 (w) x 12.5 (d) in., covers all major national/international and public/private Virginio Ferrari artworks from 1957-2016. The monograph includes over 800 high quality photographs of sculptures, environmental installations, proposal renderings, mixed-media works, designs, paintings, posters and catalog covers. The book is in English and Italian, and includes an introduction essay and interview by acclaimed art historian Arturo Carlo Quintavalle. Seventeen historical essays by historians and scholars from Ferrari's past exhibit catalogs are included throughout the book putting into context each period of work that Ferrari produced, along with an updated curriculum vitae, biography, bibliography, and full index. Marco G. Ferrari worked in collaboration with Virginio Ferrari, Marisa Ferrari, Samata/Mason (design firm), Grafiche Aurora (printer), Fabio Ferrari (associate professor of Italian studies Franklin University Switzerland, and Alberto Ferrari (graphic designer), to ensure that each artwork presented was elegantly framed and documented. Ferrari Studios has been independently producing and financing this project for over 10 years, along with the assistance of collectors, friends, family members, the Istituto Italiano di Cultura, Chicago, and John D. Kuhns. The dedication and energy of Ferrari Studios, collaborators and assistants in producing the book, will provide the reader the opportunity to fully grasp Virginio Ferrari's great artistic evolution, thus documenting and forging one of the great sculptors of our time.

The Grants Register 2016 Createspace Independent Pub Have you ever sent out your resume to prospective employers and wondered why you never heard back from them? Were you surprised when the world didn't beat a path to your door offering you your dream job? Or maybe you are one of the millions of people who are trying to change careers and wondered why nobody is giving you a chance to prove your skills. Have you ever thought that your resume could be part of the problem? Blockbuster Resumes combines the timeless wisdom of Cecil B. DeMille, the man who invented Hollywood with the latest trends and insider secrets to provide you with an easy-to-follow strategy to dazzle your audience and blow away the competition. The book also includes the specific tools and resources that you can begin using to create your own Blockbuster Resume today. My name is Robert Hammond and I am the creator of BlockbusterResume.org. You may know me as the author of such books as Credit Secrets, Life After Debt, and Identity Theft. Blockbuster Resumes was inspired by my best-selling book, Ready When You Are: Cecil B. DeMille's Ten Commandments for Success. As you know, Cecil B. DeMille was the most famous Hollywood filmmaker in history and one of the greatest showmen on earth. Known as "the man who invented Hollywood," C.B. DeMille was responsible for some of the greatest blockbuster movies the world has ever seen, including Cleopatra, The Greatest Show on Earth, and The Ten Commandments. I've been studying DeMille for many years and have found that his success principles can apply to every area of life. So now, I want to help people who have been looking for jobs or wanting to change careers by applying Cecil B. DeMille's blockbuster success principles to resume writing. In addition to working as a screenwriter, producer, writing coach, and creative executive, I have over a dozen years experience in state and local government consulting, management, job development, and vocational counseling. I've worked with the leadership of the California State Employment Development Department (EDD)'s Career One Stops and Workforce Investment Act (WIA) partners. Over the years, many people have asked me to transform their long, boring resumes into dynamic executive summaries that I call Blockbuster Resumes. Like Cecil B. DeMille movies, Blockbuster Resumes are uniquely designed to dazzle your audience and blow away the competition.

This book is generally focused on food choice and which factors are associated with the decisions that define people's eating behaviour. These factors are highly variable and include influences from the surrounding environment as well as the individual characteristics of each person. The book includes a number of chapters that address these issues from different points of view. Some explore the psychology of food choices or the cultural aspects and tradition, as well as the influence of surrounding contexts. Others focus on the role of lifestyle on eating practices and health motivations, but also the food marketing and the sensory aspects of food, as a way to incentive consumption. Finally, sustainability concerns and environmental impacts can also shape and help change people's food choices. Within the chapters gathered on this book you will find key topics that apply to everyday food choices or that can help target food consumption goals towards better health, more sustainable food chains and happier life styles.

A CANADIAN POETRY BOOK OF THE YEAR, THE NATIONAL POST WINNER OF THE PAT LOWTHER MEMORIAL AWARD "Alexandra Oliver has many arrows in her quiver—all of them sharpened to a fine point. This is an excellent and entertaining collection."—TIMOTHY STEELE In Meeting the Tormentors in Safeway, Alexandra Oliver zooms in on the inertias, anxieties, comedies, cruelties, and epiphanies of domestic life: They all had names like Jennifer or Lynne or Katherine; they all had bone-blonde hair, that wet, flat cut with bangs. They pulled your chair from underneath you, shoved their small fists in your face. Too soon, you knew it would begin, those minkish teeth like shrapnel in the air, the Bacchic taunts, the Herculean dare, their soccer cleats against your porcine shin, that laugh, which sounded like a hundred birds escaping from a gunshot through the reeds— and now you have to face it all again: the joyful freckled faces lost for words in supermarkets, as those red hands squeeze your own. It's been so long! They say. Amen. Oliver's poems, which she describes as "text-based home movies," unveil a cinematic vision of suburbia at once comical and poignant: framed to renew our curiosity in the mundane and pressing rhyme and metre to their utmost, Meeting the Tormentors in Safeway is a five-star performance from Canada's new formalist sensation. "Alexandra Oliver is in full command of a saber wit and impeccable ear. Lucky the reader along for the ride."—JEANNE MARIE BEAUMONT "Brilliantly contemporary poems in traditional forms, the work of a stunning new voice."—CHARLES MARTIN Alexandra Oliver was born in Vancouver, Canada and divides her time between Toronto and Glasgow, Scotland. Her most recent book is Meeting the Tormentors in Safeway (Biblioasis). She currently teaches in the Stonecoast MFA Program at the University of Southern Maine.
