In the field of economic analysis, computability in the formation of economic hypotheses is seen as the way forward. In this book, Professor Velupillai implements a theoretical research program along these lines. Choice theory, learning rational expectations equilibria, the persistence of adaptive behaviour, arithmetical games, aspects of production theory, and economic dynamics are given recursion theoretic (i.e. computable) interpretations . These interpretations lead to new kinds of questions being posed by the economic theorist. In particular, recursion theoretic decision problems replace standard optimisation paradigms in economic analysis. Economic theoretic questions, posed recursion-theoretically, lead to answers that are ambiguous: undecidable choices, uncomputable learning processes, and algorithmically unplayable games become standard answers.

Professor Velupillai argues that a recursion theoretic formalisation of economic analysis is computable. Economics makes the subject intrinsically inductive and computational. Teaching Business, Economics and Enterprise 14-19 Hodder Education

In the 21st century, one of the most noteworthy changes in the human rights debate relates to the increased recognition of the link between business and human rights. This book is an attempt to explore this relationship and also to look into the obligations of the state and transnational corporations in the promotion of human rights. Business and Human Rights discusses how globalization has affected individuals in the enjoyment of their human rights in relation to the activities of corporations. The book addresses what additional steps the states should take to protect against human rights abuses by business	enterprises that are owned or controlled by the state. Moreover, it covers, in depth, the role and contribution of the United	Nations in business and human rights. The book includes several real- life case studies to help the readers understand the topics discussed.
