Given the vastness of the Net, what makes pages unique is generally the personal material that the author brings to the table. Depth. The best Home Pages always give you a sense that there is something beneath the surface, and that exploration will be rewarded with new discoveries. Web Page Design - Kevin Werbach The footer is the section of a document that is in the bottom margin. Headers and footers may contain page numbers, dates, chapter titles, author's name or footnotes. Typically, the information entered in the header or footer areas appears on every page of a document. Make the First Page Header or Footer Different in Word Once you save a red link there, and create the page, the link will turn blue and will be accessible anytime you visit it. Go to your user or user talk page (both permanently linked at the top of any Wikipedia page); Surround the page title you want to create in doubled brackets, e.g., [[Proposed Title]]; Click the Publish changes button; Wikipedia: How to create a page - Wikipedia To make a title page with APA, space your title down the page about 1/3 of the way. Set your computer to double space the title page, and center all of your information horizontally. If your title is especially long, you can use 2 lines for it, but remember to cut out any extra words and to be as precise as possible.³ Ways to Make a Title Page - wikiHow

What makes it PAGE. This is a book about the 64 bit Windows 7 Virtual Memory Manager (VMM). Before I continue on, I need to put in a disclaimer. I cannot speak for the technical accuracy of the book, it has been over 20 years since I took a class at Microsoft University and I think the term has morphed into a career center.
