Counterfeit Revival New York, T. Nelson [1958]

Pentecostalism was born at the turn of the twentieth century in a "tumble-down shack" in a rundown semi-industrial area of Los Angeles composed of a tombstone shop, saloons, livery stables and railroad freight yards. One hundred years later Pentecostalism has not only proven to be the most dynamic representative of Christian faith in the past century, but a transnational religious phenomenon as well. In a global context Pentecostalism has attained a membership of 500 million growing at the rate of 20 million new members a year. Aimee Semple McPherson, born on a Canadian farm, was Pentecostalism's first celebrity, its "female Billy Sunday". Arriving in Southern California with her mother, two children and $100.00 in 1920, "Sister Aimee", as she was fondly known, quickly achieved the height of her fame. In 1926, by age 35, "Sister Aimee" would pastor "America's largest 'class A' church", perhaps becoming the country's first mega church pastor. In Los Angeles she quickly became a folk hero and civic institution. Hollywood discovered her when she brilliantly united the sacred with the profane. Anthony Quinn would play in the Temple band and Aimee would baptize Marilyn Monroe, council Jean Harlow and become friends with Charlie Chaplain, Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford. Based on the biographer's first time access to internal church documents and cooperation of Aimee's family and friends, this major biography offers a sympathetic appraisal of her rise to fame, revivals in major cities and influence on American religion and culture in the Jazz Age. The biographer takes the reader behind the scenes of Aimee's fame to the early days of her harsh apprenticeship in revival tents, failed marriages and poverty. Barfoot recreates the career of this "called" and driven woman through oral history, church documents and by a creative use of new source material. Written with warmth and often as dramatic as Aimee, herself, the author successfully captures not only what made Aimee famous but also what transformed Pentecostalism from its meager Azusa Street mission beginnings into a transnational, global religion.

The world called me a fool for having given my entire life to One whom I've never seen. I know exactly what I'm going to say when I stand in His presence. When I look upon that wonderful face of Jesus, I'll have just one thing to say: "I tried." I gave of myself the best I knew how. My redemption will have been perfected when I stand and see Him who made it all possible.

A smart, powerful, charismatic preacher brought back to life On October 15, 1974, Johnny Carson welcomed his next guest on The Tonight Show with these words: "I imagine there are very few people who are not aware of Kathryn Kuhlman. She probably, along with Billy Graham, is one of the best-known ministers or preachers in the country." But while many people today recognize Billy Graham, not many remember Kathryn Kuhlman (1907–1976), who preached faith and miracles to countless people over the fifty-five years of her ministry and became one of the most important figures in the rise of charismatic Christianity. In The Miracle Lady Amy Collier Artman tells the story of Kuhlman's life and, in the process, relates the larger story of charismatic Christianity, particularly how it moved from the fringes of American society to the mainstream. Tracing her remarkable career as a media-savvy preacher and fleshing out her unconventional character, Artman also shows how Kuhlman skillfully navigated the oppressive structures, rules, and landmines that surrounded female religious leaders in her conservative circles.

Pullum examines the rhetorical genre of 20th-century American faith healing. He first analyzes respectively the rhetoric of Aimee Semple McPherson, William Branham, Oral Roberts, Asa Alonzo Allen, Ernest Angley, Kathryn Kuhlman, and Benny Hinn—the most prominent American faith healers of this century. For each, he discusses their background, the nature of the audiences to whom they preached, and why they were so successful. Pullum concludes by drawing together the major rhetorical features of faith-healing discourse. Pullum shows that faith-healing discourse follows the strategy of offering hope to the hopeless, giving God the glory, articulating humble beginnings, offering testimony of past personal afflictions overcome, and drawing on scripture to bolster their claims. This discourse is often presented in dynamic fashion, making it not only credible, but entertaining as well. After elucidating the rhetorical patterns of faith healers, Pullum evaluates claims of the miraculous in light of the standard that they set for themselves. In other words, miracles as presented by faith healers are juxtaposed to the types one reads about in the Bible. Pullum also attempts to account for why people claim miraculous cures in spite of the fact that nothing miraculous has occurred in the services of faith healers.

Hank Hanegraaff documents the danger of looking for God in all the wrong places and goes behind the scenes into the wildly popular and bizarre world of contemporary revivalism. Hanegraaff masterfully exposes the stark contrast between these deeds of the flesh and a genuine work of the Spirit by contrasting modern "revivals" with the scriptural examples of God's movement among His people.

Arise and Shine outlines the positive roles women can play in the family, the church, and society at large. Mulu Deboch looks at some of the negative stereotypes about women, and considers whether they have any merit. She also discusses the current plight women face as they disproportionately bear the burden of poverty, especially in situations where girls are not afforded the opportunity to go to school. Reviewing current issues for women in light of a biblical perspective, Deboch argues that women are the pillars of society. Finally, she looks at some of the great women of history and the Bible, women who could serve as inspiration for us today.

The Story of My Life Chosen Books

For Such a Time as This is the meticulously researched, tenderly written biography of the legendary Maria Woodworth-Etter, a woman before her time, who preached of repentance, salvation, holiness, healing, and the baptism of the Holy Spirit. Her success inspired Aimee Semple McPherson and paved the way for Kathryn Kuhlman, Marilyn Hickey, and Joyce Meyer. Historian Grant Wacker said of her, "No one commanded greater awe in the Pentecostal circles." Carl Brumback described her as "looking just like your grandmother, but who exercised tremendous spiritual authority over sin, disease, and demons." But she was also very human, as flawed and fragile as we all are. Warner strikes a delicate balance for the reader between revealing the woman and portraying her power. A must-read for every spirit-filled Christian.

"Don't go to that church across town where that woman is preaching or you will go to hell!" I could not help but laugh when two children told me what one of their teachers said. It was funny because it was absurd, but it was completely inaccurate. Yes, I am a woman, and I am a preacher. I cannot help it. Take it up with God, He did it! My husband says it is in my DNA. Just look at my eleventh great grandfather through my grandfather, Alonzo Yancey's line. His name was Alexander Leighton, a Scottish medical doctor and Puritan preacher. He was best known for his 1630 pamphlet that attacked the Anglican Church, and which led to his torture by King Charles I in the Star Chamber. I am thankful God did not let me know about the stigma of "women in ministry." It was many years later I found out there were a few unbelievers. LOL! I grew up under the ministries of Maria Woodworth Etter, the healing evangelist Kathryn Kuhlman, faith healer and evangelist Aimee Semple McPherson (founder of Four Square), and I even had a woman as my pastor. I never heard a sermon for or against women in ministry. They just did what they did. They made us laugh, cry, pray, learn, get closer to God and throw the lifeline out for others. Daughter of the Sanctuary was first published in 1984. In this revised edition, I have added approximately nine chapters and included a few pictures. This is the story of my life as a woman evangelist.

Turn the Pulpit Loose features the lives and words of eighteen women evangelists including Sojourner Truth and Evangeline Booth, and lesser-known figures such as Jarena Lee (an African Methodist from the early 1800s) and Uldine Utley (a child evangelist in the early 1900s) who helped to shape American religious life from the nation's infancy to the present. Highlighting substantial primary sources – sermons, articles, diaries, letters, speeches, and autobiographies – Priscilla Pope-Levison weaves together fascinating narratives of each woman's life: her conversion and calling to preach, her primary evangelistic method, and her reflections about women in general. This anthology, complete with photographs of each evangelist, is an indispensable resource for a wide range of academic fields, including religion, history, women's studies, and literature.

Noble women of the Bible also functioned in God's service in one capacity or another. This is what 'ministry' is - serving the Lord. This book looks at all the notable women of the Bible and how God used them. What about the fivefold ministry (Ephesians 4:11-13)? Can women serve the Lord as evangelists, teachers or pastors? What's the Bible say? Why can't women serve in God's kingdom and be ministers? After all, were Aimee Semple McPherson and Kathryn Kuhlman in gross sin by serving as healing evangelists, reaching millions? Obviously not. This topic is important because there are sincere believers in the body of Christ who question the legitimacy of women in ministry and base their disapproval (or agnosticism) on a couple verses in the New Testament. "Women in Ministry" starts with what theologians call the 'Genesis curse, ' which is where some sincere believers get the idea that God ordained men to "rule over" women. Is this so? Can a CURSE be a blessing or a moral command, a law? Find out what the Holy Scriptures REALLY teach on this vital subject
