This book is open access under a CC BY 4.0 license. This volume argues for the need of a common ground that bridges leadership studies, curriculum theory, and Didaktik. It proposes a non-affirmative education theory and its core concepts along with discursive institutionalism as an analytical tool to bridge these fields. It concludes with implications of its coherent theoretical framing for future empirical research. Recent neoliberal policies and transnational governance practices point toward new tensions in nation state education. These challenges affect governance, leadership and curriculum, involving changes in aims and values that demand coherence. Yet, the traditionally disparate fields of educational leadership, curriculum theory and Didaktik have developed separately, both in terms of approaches to theory and theorizing in USA, Europe and Asia, and in the ways in which these theoretical traditions have informed empirical studies over time. An additional aspect is that modern education theory was developed in relation to nation state education, which, in the meantime, has become more complicated due to issues of 'globopolitanism'. This volume examines the current state of affairs and addresses the issues involved. In doing so, it opens up a space for a renewed and thoughtful dialogue to rethink and re-theorize these traditions with non-affirmative education theory moving beyond social reproduction and social transformation perspectives.

This volume explores one of the central issues that has been debated in internet studies in recent years: locality, and the extent to which cultural production online can be embedded in a specific place. The particular focus of the book is on the practices of net artists in Latin America, and how their work interrogates some of the central place-based concerns of Latin(o) American identity through their on- and offline cultural practice. Six particular works by artists of different countries in Latin America and within Latina/o communities in the US are studied in detail, with one each from Uruguay, Chile, Argentina, Colombia, the US-Mexico border, and the US. Each chapter explores how each artist represents place in their works, and, in particular how traditional place-based affiliations, or notions of territorial identity, end up reproduced, re-affirmed, or even transformed online. At the same time, the book explores how these net.artists make use of new media technologies to express alternative viewpoints about the locations they represent, and use the internet as a space for the recuperation of cultural memory.

Everett Ruess, the young poet and artist who disappeared into the desert canyonlands of Utah in 1934, has become widely known posthumously as the spokesman for the spirit of the high desert. Many have been inspired by his intense search for adventure, leaving behind the amenities of a comfortable life. His search for ultimate beauty and oneness with nature is chronicled in this remarkable collection of letters to family and friends.

Many people would like to change their lives, but only a few manage to do so. It is not easy to break the chains of fear and take that first step alone and swim against the current. Breaking free from the social structure of the life-model we are taught is not easy, yet sometimes it is essential for survival. In this raw autobiography I tell how I got to the point of taking that first much coveted step to get out of my teenage black hole made of drug-addiction, violence, crime and prostitution. I describe the abyss of rage and restlessness into which I had plunged, losing myself in the rotten environment of a big city. I talk about taboo subjects, like drugs, through the testimony of who has abused for many years. I tell the story of solo-travelling as a therapy after the nth overdose, when I was only twenty. The inner agony, the longing for peace, the many painful relapses. I share the devastating, yet illuminating experience of my mother's illness and death. From this pain a powerful spark for life was born inside me, which pushed me to a deep inner revolution, that allowed me to transform my existence into an extraordinary never-ending story. I travelled for more than 200.000 km, crossing many countries, without flying, and I found my social mission: I try to get close to those who are experiencing the darkness I have lived, to help them crawl out here, to finally breathe some peace and love for life.

From the strictly regimented church bells to the freewheeling chatter of civic life, Renaissance Florence was a city built not just of stone but of sound as well. An evocative alternative to the dominant visual understanding of urban spaces, The Noisy Renaissance examines the premodern city as an acoustic phenomenon in which citizens used sound to navigate space and society. Analyzing a range of documentary and literary evidence, art and architectural historian Niall Atkinson creates an "acoustic topography" of Florence. The dissemination of official messages, the rhythm of prayer, and the murmur of rumor and gossip combined to form a soundscape that became a foundation in the creation and maintenance of the urban community just as much as the city's physical buildings. Sound in this space triggered a wide variety of social behaviors and spatial relations: hierarchical, personal, communal, political, domestic, sexual, spiritual, and religious. By exploring these rarely studied soundscapes, Atkinson shows Florence to be both an exceptional and an exemplary case study of urban conditions in the early modern period.

Un'esperienza di Vita straordinaria. 36.000 chilometri da Capo di Buona Speranza (Sudafrica) fino a

Capo Nord (Norvegia). I due estremi del mondo uniti in duecento intensi giorni di viaggio in cui il protagonista utilizza solo trasporti pubblici o recupera passaggi in autostop. Mozzafiato paesaggi primordiali, ancestrali tribù africane, il regno degli animali selvatici, incontri magici e una grande ospitalità. Le straordinarie bellezze dei deserti della Namibia e dell'Etiopia. L'affascinante e maestoso Antico Egitto. Un grande contatto culturale con i popoli del continente più povero e misterioso. E poi i momenti difficili, lo sconforto, il pericolo durante la traversata dell'Africa nera. Negli oltre cento mezzi presi in più di sei mesi di viaggio, Carlo incontra solo due stranieri e quindi si trova quasi sempre l'unico bianco su mezzi sgangherati o nelle caotiche stazioni delle deliranti metropoli africane. Subisce alcune aggressioni, anche a mano armata. Si trova nel mezzo di uno storico colpo di Stato ad Harare, in Zimbabwe, dove assiste alla caduta di Mugabe dopo trentasette anni di dittatura. Viaggia con i rifugiati del Malawi, con i quali si trova a dover corrompere la polizia di frontiera. Affronta "viaggi della speranza" in autostop attraverso alcuni dei deserti più grandi al mondo, in Botswana e in Sudan. Poi il passaggio nella conflittualità del Medio Oriente e la traversata del Mediterraneo a bordo di una nave mercantile, per sbarcare infine in Italia e tirare su dritto verso la Scandinavia. Questa epica impresa si conclude nell'estremo nord del mondo, a Capo Nord, in condizioni climatiche avverse. L'ultimo capitolo di un progetto durato sette anni attraverso tutti i continenti, senza prendere aerei e percorrendo oltre 200.000 chilometri. Un'immensa ricchezza condivisa, pura Esperienza di Vita. Un profondo viaggio introspettivo dove si respira la grande evoluzione interiore che trasmette la strada.

This accessible, hands-on text not only introduces students to the important topics in historical linguistics but also shows them how to apply the methods described and how to think about the issues; abundant examples and exercises allow students to focus on how to do historical linguistics. Distinctive to this text is its integration of the standard topics with others now considered important to the field, including syntactic change, grammaticalization, sociolinguistic contributions to linguistic change, distant genetic relationships, areal linguistics, and linguistic prehistory. Examples are taken from a broad range of languages; those from the more familiar English, French, German, and Spanish make the topics more accessible, while those from non-Indo-European languages show the depth and range of the concepts they illustrate. This second edition features expanded explanations and examples as well as updates in light of recent work in linguistics, including a defense of the family tree model, a response to recent claims on lexical diffusion/frequency, and a section on why languages diversify and spread.
